What is "Loy Krathong"

(Festival of Floating Bowls)

When the rivers and canals are full of water on the full moon night of the Twelfth Lunar month, the tide in the rivers is highest and the moon at its brightest, creating a romantic setting ideal for lovers. The Thai people choose this day to hold the 'Loy Krathong' festival, or the 'festival of light.' the Loy Krathong Festival takes place in all parts of Thailand. Loy Krathong is one of the two most recognized festivals in Thailand.

Prepare to join this beautiful traditional event by buying or making a "Krathong", the floating bowl shaped vessel usually make out of banana leaves. (The "Loy" in the name of the festival means to float. While 'Krathong' refers to the lotus-shaped receptacle which can float on the water). Originally, the Krathong was made of banana leaves or the layers of the trunk of a banana tree or a spider lily plant. A Krathong contains food, betel nuts, flowers, joss sticks, candle and coins. The making of a Krathong is much more creative these days as many more materials are available. Krathong typically contain a candle, three incense sticks and a small coin set among flowers. People light the candles and incense, make a wish, and send their Krathong gently floating in water. As they go, believe all bad luck suppose to disappear with Krathong (bowl).

As they launch their krathong, individuals take a moment to say a small or long prayer and make a wish. Everyone hopes that their candles keep burning into the night, symbolizing longevity and that their wishes will come true. Lovers hope that their krathongs float together. People sit and enjoy the spectacular sight of hundreds of Krathong on the water. Laughter and happiness is in the air. Festivals are further enhanced with a colorful street procession and cultural performances for everyone to enjoy. Altogether it is considered a romantic night for couples or lovers. Couples who make a wish together on Loy Krathong are thought to stay together in the future.

The traditional practice of Loy Krathong was meant to pay homage to the holy footprint of the Buddha on the beach of the Namada River in India.
